NEWS OF COUNTY FARM BUREAUS

By Byron Dyer

Bulloch county members will have the Blue Cross and Shield health insurance program available to them starting in 1956.

Allen R. Laster, member of the local rural organization was authorized to write the Blue Cross officials the county was open to the organization now when the group could set up its program here, it was announced at the 25th Farm Bureau meeting last Tuesday night.

The 25th group joined Bryan county for several miles where Blue Cross was available to the Farm Bureau and had been most consistent that this service be available to the Bulloch county Farm Bureau also. They had repeatedly asked Mr. Laster and W. C. Hodges, the county president, to procure this service.

J. H. Futch was named president of the group for next year, as well as Carl Her being named vice president and H. L. Hood Jr., secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Edwin Futch and Mrs. William Starling led the singing of Christmas carols at 8:15, and William Starling read the scripture of the first Christmas. Three short movies of a light nature were also a part of the program. The presents on the Christmas tree were exchanged. A fruit, cake and coffee supper was served.

Ivanhoe moved its January meeting to December 22 so they could also have a Christmas party and celebrate together.

Mrs. Ann Groover showed a film strip of the poem, "The Night Before Christmas," while Frances Groover read the poem. Mrs. W. A. Groover led the group in singing several Christmas carols.

Mr. Hodges reported that the national convention in Chicago last week was not at all the liking of the southern group as far as price support recommendations were concerned, but that it was truly a working conference with no time left for sight seeing or play. The position agriculture generally is in was appreciated by the some 6,000 delegates to the extent that every minute was spent trying to work out some solution to the problems farmers are faced with, Mr. Hodges declared.

The export outlook is not too good for farm surpluses, but should improve some. He pointed out that the agricultural product-

FORESTRY NEWS

By J. W. Roberts, County Forest Ranger Telephone 4-2042

Bulloch County Forestry Unit, which devotes itself primarily to keeping wild-fire out of the county's 238,000 acres woodland, this week laid equal stress on another fire danger—carelessness with Christmas tree lighting.

"We who fight fire in Bulloch County's woodlands," said the Ranger, "know that unattended, unchecked fire in any form is dangerous. For that reason we are going to place special emphasis between now and January 1 on trying to prevent fires in the home caused by Christmas tree lighting."

Ranger J. W. Roberts advised making daily checks on Christmas tree lighting during the entire period the tree is set up in the house. He added that all wiring equipment should carry the Underwriters Laboratory seal.

"It is a wise idea," he added, "to turn off the Christmas tree lights whenever the household goes to bed at night and when the family leaves the house for any period of time. We recommend that because the longer the tree is lighted, the more it will dry out. Although dryness alone does not cause fire, it does lower the flash point of the foliage. Dryness, therefore, is doubly dangerous in case foliage should be ignited from a short circuit or chance spark."

The County Forestry Unit warned against setting up toy electric lights around Christmas trees and pointed out this is a common cause of holiday season fires.

Nurserymen in some areas vary special sprays to prevent the tree's moisture from evaporating and to make the tree less inflammable. Spraying the tree with boric acid solution or borax and water also makes the tree less inflammable.

Light Thrown On Dog Disease

The available information on histoplasmosis in dogs has been increased considerably during the past five years, thanks to outstanding work done by veterinary research, according to a report from the American Veterinary Medical Association.

The application of the published experimental data, combined with repeated observations of clinical cases, has enabled the small animal veterinarian to diagnose the disease repeatedly during the past few years. Confidence has increased in the diagnostic evidence for histoplasmosis and vet-ernarians now make routine application of the procedures used to identify the infection in the clinic," the AVMA says.

Histoplasmosis is a disease caused by fungus. Most cases occur in adult dogs, with approximately 90 per cent of the cases falling in the age range of two to eight years.

The two most common signs of histoplasmosis are a moist, harsh, persistent cough and protracted diarrhea. There often is a gradual loss of weight, dryness and partial loss of hair and the loss or vigor. Some cases are characterized by enlargement of superficial lymph glands, liver or spleen. When these latter symptoms appear, especially in a young, non-vaccinated dog, it is difficult to distinguish such cases as their outward from disease caused by common viral infections the report indicated.

Up to six weeks of immunity from distemper may be transferred to a puppy through the colostrum milk of its mother. This is called maternal immunity, but after six weeks, the veterinarian should be called on to immunize the pet.

Dr. A. H. Quin, president of the AVMA, received the trophy from Dr. H. E. Robinson, director of food company, celebrating its laboratories for Swift & Company, tennial this year.
